

ABSTRACT

A tank for producing arsenic vapor including a crucible located inside an exterior enclosure which isolates the crucible from the ambient atmosphere such that a space exists between the crucible and the exterior enclosure, the space being subjected to a pressure lower than atmospheric pressure, the crucible having an outlet duct and an input flange located at or adjacent a superheated portion of the crucible.